Lawn Musicale.

Over one hundred young society people were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Oatley Anderson at the lawn musicale given Tuesday evening at a charmingly decorated home at the corner of Tenth and Broadway streets. The Anderson home was prettily decorated in canna and sunflowers, carrying out a yellow color scheme, and the porch was arranged as a stage and brilliantly lighted. Seats dotted the lawn and the guests enjoyed the out of door comforts of the pleasant evening while listening to the delightful program. A piano solo "Etude" was the first number, being capably rendered by Miss Laura Julien, and Miss Zella Stoddard followed with an interesting reading, "Joe's Crime." Bernard Baird gave two favorite solos, "Mother Machree" and "A Bowl of Roses," and two inspiring piano duets, "A Comrade in Arms" and "Taps" were rendered by Mrs. Wessie Ray and Ada Bess Burney. Miss Joy Ringer then delighted the guests with two whistling solos, accompanied on the piano by Miss Rebecca Armstrong. "Idilio" and "Chin Chin" were two enjoyable instrumental selections played by Miss Marjorie Dwyer and Sharon Owsley sang "If I Were a Rose" and "Moon, Moon, Moon." Miss Lavelle Trader followed with a pretty piano solo, "Shepherd Boy," and Miss Elsie Ann Decker contributed to the program with two choice vocal selections, "When Love Is Kind" and "The Clover." "Molly," a reading by Pearl Ellen Crawford was next heartily enjoyed and the beautiful song, "A Perfect Day," by Miss William Crawford, accompanied by Miss Sue Gilkey, with cello obligato, concluded the program.

A musicale contest next amused the young folks. Prizes were drawn for singing popular songs. Miss Elsie Decker and Mr. Reece Smith were most successful in this and received the prizes, a box of yellow crepe de chine handkerchiefs and a gold tie clasp. The boobies, tin horns with the advice, "If you can't sing, too," were presented Misses Susie King and William Crawford. ## BABY PARADE ON BOARDWALK AT ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City without its famous annual baby parade would lose much of its distinction. The parade this year was the most successful ever held.

One of the Many Taffeta Gowns for Midsummer

This dress of royal blue taffeta is one of the best and most attractive that have appeared among a great number of models employing this silk. It is of that soft variety called chiffon taffeta, and is the coolest and crispest of gowns for midsummer, outside the world of wash fabrics.

The skirt has a plain-fitted yoke extending to the hips, to which the body is sewed. This latter is made of the silk laid in close, single box plaits and is finished with a two and one-half inch hem at the bottom. Three rows of stitching, set close together, and parallel to each other.

The coat is cut with a plain yoke also. The lower edge of the yoke is set in shallow curves with an inconspicuous point at each side on the bust. The point reappears in the center of the back. Reversing the order of things in the skirt, the yoke overlaps the plaits in the jacket and but two rows of stitching are used in joining it to the body. A rolling collar and turned-back cuffs, as plain as can be, take care of the finishing of neck and sleeves. A plain belt made over a crinoline foundation, three inches wide, is tacked to the jacket a little below the normal waist line. It is ornamented with three ball buttons at the front. They are forms covered with the silk, and two of them are used on the cuffs in the manner shown in the picture. White ball buttons of composition are effectively used on gowns of blue or black taffeta, and might be substituted for those that are silk-covered, to add snap to this trim suit.

The neck is much improved by a collar of white poplin, or organza, which rolls over the coat, with and fulfills its mission—small feather loops at the front, and a purse of dark blue leather, banded with white, are accessories that add tone to a dress that is distinguished by very clever designing. It seems very simple but the best of talent is required to achieve simplicity and distinction at the same time.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Graceful Finish.

Cerise, turquoise and violet are shades which are relieving the somberness of many gowns, and on so many of the evening dresses for young people the garlands of small flowers make a graceful finish either on flounces or above them.

Despondency Due to Indigestion.

"About three months ago when I was suffering from indigestion which caused headache and dizzy spells and made me feel tired and despondent, I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets," writes Mrs. Geo. Hon, Macedon, N. Y. "This medicine proved to be the very thing I needed, as one day's treatment relieved me greatly. I used two bottles of Chamberlain's Tablets and they rid me of my trouble."—Use White Lead.

Disraeli's Fierce Mustaches.

It is hard to picture either Disraeli or Gladstone with a mustache, yet the former statesman grew one at a time when such an adornment was rare among Englishmen. In his "Life of Disraeli," Mr. G. E. Buckle quotes a letter, written in December, 1850, in which Lord William Beresford tells Lord Stanley: "I hear Disraeli is figuring about with a fierce pair of mustaches. Now this is very sad, for he is not a person who ought to attract attention by outer dress and appearance, but by his talents. I do trust that this style is assumed only while he is rusticated in the bushwoods of Buckinghamshire, and that next month he will appear in the world in a more humanized form."
